

Back again

4Jan2023

Yes, it's been awhile. Lots of haps in our family. The holidays, Mary's knee surgery, several small projects in the shop. Yes, I've been busy – retirement busy, that is. But that's no excuse for my abject failure to make entries here.

Anyway, I am indeed back and I'll be posting several woodworking projects in the near term. Also, trying to get back to writing on a more regular basis. We'll see.

Meanwhile, today I'm posting a series of short videos detailing my process of making an emerging chalice from an odd chunk my brother gave me. I still haven't learned to edit so please bear with me as you'll have to click through the individual snippets and some of them are downright repetitive. I promise to learn the software in the new year. To view this project, click here.

Speaking of the New Year, I hope all is well with you and yours as we head into 2023.
